

AMERICAN
PRECIOUS METALS

Market Comments from Jerry Williams

We now find ourselves in the summer doldrums, a time which typically, with a few exceptions, is lackluster for markets. One has to accept that the naysayers and short sellers have succeeded in suppressing the metals markets, for now. Investor sentiment continues to be negative. Unless some financial calamity occurs, we may see a test or even a penetration of the 2 year lows of $1,180 gold and $18 silver.

Do we throw in the towel? Some already have and gone back to the “safety” of cash or bought rental property or followed the crowd into the stock market. To us, that is like cancelling your life insurance policy because you didn’t die last year.

Watching your net worth decline isn’t pleasant, admittedly, particularly if you took position in metals in the last 2 years. That is just short term bad timing in our opinion. The markets have been, and are now, dominated by large, powerful interests with an agenda. Financial markets are no longer free and, in fact, as evidenced by all the investigations and indictments, have been totally corrupted. All the more reason to seek security in some percentage of precious metals held PHYSICALLY off the grid as insurance against the unthinkable (ex. Cyprus, Greece, Argentina)

For us it may get worse before it gets better. Don’t panic, it’s a long term race. Our advice is consistent: never sell unless you have to.

Jerry on Rich Dad Radio Show - Heavy Metal (Aired May 3, 2014)

Ever get the feeling you're being ripped off, but you're not sure how? In 1971, the United States went off the gold exchange standard, turning the U.S. dollar into a fiat currency. Since then, the gold price has increased dramatically from $35 per ounce to as high as $1,900 per ounce in 2011. It currently sits around $1,260 per ounce.

In this radio program, Kim and Robert Kiyosaki talk with Jerry Williams (apmaz.com) and Anthem Blanchard (anthemvault.com) about the government's manipulation of metal and how it's ripping off the "savers" in society.

Not Every Gold Trade Profits Buyer

We couldn't have said it better ourselves. This article is a concise and well thought out piece on the likelihood of gold confiscation. This is a concern of many gold buyers and a concept used by many deceptive coin dealers as a way to overcharge their clients.

“Given the reason for the “collector coin” exemption in the original 1933 Executive Order, does owning pre-1934 gold coins offer any greater protection against any future U.S. government action that might call for Americans to turn in their gold coins and bullion?”

Commonly asked questions

One of the most frequent questions we are asked by clients is:

Are there any government forms to fill out?

No forms are filled out when you make a purchase, regardless of quantity, unless you pay with physical cash in excess of $10,000.00. Cash received in excess of $10,000 requires us to fill out IRS Form 8300, which involves obtaining certain information from you.

If you decide to sell your precious metals, the sale of certain, specifically named products requires us to fill out a 1099-B gross proceeds report. For instance, selling South African Krugerrands or Canadian Maple Leafs in quantities of 25 ounces or more, or silver bullion in excess of 1,000 ounces, we would need to obtain a Social Security number, name and address from you so that we may issue you a 1099-B gross proceeds report at year end.
